Personal Experience:

Technical Round 1:

- At 4 PM, I had my first technical interview. Nineteen students were shortlisted for this round.
- The interview began with an introduction,
- followed by a guesstimate question: Estimate the revenue of all cinemas in Mumbai for a single day. I was also asked about my biggest achievements till date, and to describe the lowest point in my life and how I managed it.
- what I understand by the term business analyst,
- In addition, I was asked to propose a unique LLM idea, different from ChatGPT, and explain how it could benefit the company's clients. I was also advised to be prepared for SQL and Excel-related questions.
- The results of this round were announced at midnight

Technical Round 2 .

- On August 8th, 2024, I had my Technical interview, which was scheduled to start at 11 PM. Out of 14 shortlisted students, I was the first to be interviewed.
- The interview began with an introduction of myself. The entire round focused on my resume, particularly my cloud projects. We discussed various aspects of my work, including load balancing, how I deployed a website, and the intended target audience. The website in question was gym-based.
- During the interview, I was asked to calculate the number of visitors to the gym on a specific day. Additionally, I was tasked with proposing extra features to enhance the system, explaining how they would function and how clients would benefit.
- My interview lasted approximately 30 minutes.

HR interview

- It was scheduled at 2 PM, six students were shortlisted out of fourteen.
- During the interview, I was asked to introduce myself without including any technical details. The focus was on my hobbies, family background, and place of residence.
- I was presented with a hypothetical scenario: If the contribution of work in a project is unequal, and one of the team members is reluctant to NOT TO contribute, how would I handle the situation?
- Additionally, if the same individual decides to leave the project and, due to confidentiality, no new resources can be added, with the deadline fast approaching by the end of the week, would I be willing to work extra hours?
- Furthermore, assuming the next deadline is in two months, how would I approach this extended timeline?
- At the conclusion of the interview, I was given the opportunity to ask any questions.
- The official results were announced by 8:30 PM. Afterward, we took a group picture with the company representative before departing.
